

AAPSE activities...

AAPSE is involved in state, territorial, tribal, regional, and national pesticide safety education and certification, and provides a voice on current issues facing its membership.

AAPSE professional improvement provides learning opportunities through conferences and workshops on current pesticide issues.

AAPSE liaisons (members) are selected to serve on national organizations, committees, and workgroups, such as American Association of Pesticide Control Officials, Certification & Training Assessment Group, and The Pesticide Stewardship Alliance.

AAPSE's listserv is exclusively for members and keeps them up-to-date on emerging issues in pesticide safety and education. It also provides a forum to quickly get answers to certification and safety education questions.

The Journal of Pesticide Safety Education is the official journal of AAPSE (<http://jpse.org>). It provides a great opportunity to have your studies and programs published in a peer-reviewed journal, as well as to learn from colleagues about their activities.
